 PROMOTING PRETRIAL JUSTICE AND ENHANCING COMMUNITY SAFETY

Arrest-Free Rates for Defendants Released to the Community in Washington, DC: FY 2020 – FY 2024

The Pretrial Services Agency for the District of Columbia (PSA) is a national leader in the pretrial justice field by effectively supporting a system of non-financial release that promotes the fair administration of justice, while also recognizing the need to assure community safety.

Tracking new arrests during the pretrial supervision period is a critical national standard for pretrial service programs and used as an outcome measure in at least 36 states and the federal judicial system.<sup>1</sup>

PSA defines the arrest-free rate as the percentage of non-surety released defendants who remain free of new, papered, US or serious traffic charges in Washington, DC, while the original case is pending. The annual target for PSA’s arrest-free rate is 88%. Our analysis also includes data for new arrests occurring in the neighboring states of Maryland and Virginia;<sup>2</sup> and nationwide.

During fiscal year 2024, a total of 16,237 defendants were released to the community while awaiting trial. Of these, 1,808 defendants were arrested for an offense within DC while awaiting trial, leaving an arrest-free rate of 89%. When PSA’s arrest-free rate is expanded to include new arrests occurring in Maryland and Virginia, the rate remains relatively stable at around 87%. Expanding the analysis nationwide, the arrest-free rate remains consistent at 87%. The table below compares arrest-free rates locally, regionally, and nationally.
